Based on a complex query submitted using Pro-Cite bibliographic software and the Z39.50 protocol, this list of citations was compiled by searching the Library of Congress online catalog for relevant publications. Because of the limitations inherent in any online catalog search, do not rely on this document as a comprehensive or authoritative list of recent materials in the Library of Congress collections. The list is intended to give the reader only an idea of the wealth of materials which may be available for consultation. Search the Library's catalog for a more complete description of the status and availability of each item at: <http://catalog.loc.gov>.

On January 29th 2004 the Kenya Government issued a 30 day notice to all living below power lines and close to the railway line to move voluntarily or otherwise face forceful eviction. The Ministry of Public Works, Roads, and Housing declared that it would demolish all structures illegally built on road reserves. A number of schools, homes, churches, and businesses were demolished leaving the affected with no alternative place to resettle. The demolitions drew reactions from the church, local and international communities and forced the government to suspend the demolitions temporarily. In this video, the church, along with the local and international community are urging the Kenyan government to listen to the cries of the poor and consider their plight while undertaking to improve infrastructure and upgrade slums by not merely suspending the demolition but by involving the affected communities and coming up with an alternative resettlement plan.

"The authors report results from a randomized evaluation of a merit scholarship program for adolescent girls in Kenya. Girls who scored well on academic exams received a cash grant and had school fees paid. Girls eligible for the scholarship showed significant gains in academic examination scores (average gain 0.15 standard deviations). There was considerable sample attrition and no significant program impact in the smaller of the two program districts, but in the other district girls showed large gains (average gain 0.22-0.27 standard deviations), and these gains persisted one full year following the competition. There is also evidence of positive program externalities on learning-boys (who were ineligible for the awards) also showed sizable average test gains. Both student and teacher school attendance increased in the program schools. "--World Bank web site.

Masol has been known as a hotbed for armed warriors which means the women here have nothing to look back to since constant conflicts have made it almost impossible to achieve any positive development. So the Rural Women Peace Link Network brought the International Women's Day celebrations to Masol and also organized for a special candle-lighting ceremony whose theme was peace in order to give the women of this region something to look back to and to encourage them to keep up the peace process.

This is a story about rape and abortion. About love and commitment. Two young people, Jenny and Peter are in love and engaged to marry. One day in the whirlwind of romance Jenny is raped and gets pregnant as a result. What do they do? Abortion? After a struggle with their conscience they choose to marry and keep the baby. It is an appeal to family and friends to give love and support to girls and women who experience the brutality of rape. An appeal to girls with unwanted pregnancies to recognise that the baby is innocent and does not deserve to die. An appeal to love and let live.

"Pursuit of an exchange rate policy that promotes the competitiveness of exports would be greatly facilitated if the policy maker were able to establish the level of misalignment of the exchange rate and thereby try to correct for it. The motivation of this study for Uganda was therefore to derive the equilibrium exchange rate path, determine the levels of misalignment of the exchange rate and assess their impact on the performance of nontraditional exports. Estimating the equilibrium real exchange rate (ERER) involved: (a) estimation of the real effective exchange rate (REER) by the cointegration and the error correction mechanism (ECM) approaches, (b) filtering transitory factors from the "fundamentals" using the Hodrick-Prescott filter approach and the Elbadawi moving average (MA) methodology, and (c) estimating the ERER using the permanent components of the fundamentals. We find that the magnitude of misalignment, derived as the deviation of REER from ERER, greatly reduced during the period 1991-1999, when the exchange and payments system was liberalized as part of the overall improved macroeconomic management. Further, given that over-valuation of the exchange rate in excess of 15% hampers non-traditional export performance, our results suggest that the exchange rate policy should aim at minimizing over-valuation and, in fact, albeit the inflation objective, over-depreciate REER to boost non-traditional export competitiveness. An explicit estimate of the equilibrium exchange rate is therefore an important variable in exchange rate policy and export competitiveness debates"--African Economic Research Consortium web site.

"This study examined the dynamic interrelationships among domestic price level, nominal exchange rate, terms of trade of cocoa, bank rate, domestic credit and foreign exchange reserves using the cointegration, vector error correction (VEC) and vector auto regression (VAR) approaches. The cointegration analysis confirms the presence of three economically interpretable stable long-run relationships among the relevant variables. The speeds of adjustment for the foreign exchange market, the interest market and the market for cocoa are relatively higher than the speeds of adjustment for the markets of non-tradeables and domestic credit. The determinants of domestic inflation in the short run are bank rate, foreign exchange reserves, terms of trade of cocoa and government expenditure. For the short-run depreciation of the local currency, the determinants are the domestic price level, terms of trade of cocoa and foreign exchange reserves. For terms of trade of cocoa (which proxies collusion) in the short run, the determinants are domestic credit, foreign exchange reserves, terms of trade of gold and the price of petrol. The effects of monetary and terms of trade shocks are generally transmitted to the domestic price level, terms of trade of cocoa, and nominal exchange rate. The determinants of bank rate in the short run are the domestic price level, domestic credit and foreign exchange reserves. For domestic credit in the short run, determinants are the domestic price level, nominal exchange rate, bank rate, foreign exchange reserves, government expenditure and terms of trade of gold. The determinants of foreign exchange reserves in the short run are the nominal exchange rate, terms of trade of cocoa and price of petrol. From these results it is observed that the monetary authorities could control the domestic rate of inflation by reducing the relatively high bank rate. In order to arrest the continuing depreciation of the local currency, the Bank of Ghana could sell more foreign exchange in the foreign exchange market. Because the pass-through effect from the domestic price level to the nominal exchange rate is neither complete nor instantaneous, the Bank of Ghana should try to implement a consistent bank rate policy in accordance with the exchange rate intervention policy. Moreover, the Bank of Ghana should try to follow a consistent sterilization policy through domestic credit with respect to the nominal exchange rate, and, by arresting the rate of depreciation of the local currency, could solve the problem of excess liquidity. The Government of Ghana could collude with the other major producers of cocoa in order to improve its terms of trade of cocoa, and the Bank of Ghana should ensure a consistent sterilization policy through foreign exchange intervention with respect to the terms of trade of cocoa"--African Economic Research Consortium web site.

"We report results from a randomized evaluation of a merit scholarship program for adolescent girls in Kenya. Girls who scored well on academic exams had their school fees paid and received a cash grant for school supplies. Girls eligible for the scholarship showed significant gains in academic exam scores (average gain 0.12-0.19 standard deviations) and these gains persisted following the competition. There is also evidence of positive program externalities on learning: boys, who were ineligible for the awards, also showed sizeable average test gains, as did girls with low pretest scores, who were unlikely to win. Both student and teacher school attendance increased in the program schools. We discuss implications both for understanding the nature of educational production functions and for the policy debate surrounding merit scholarships"--National Bureau of Economic Research web site.

"Lack of or stagnant growth of output of any country is often caused by "shallow-finance";. A shallow financial depth (FD) means that the range of financial assets for that country is narrow. It is a scenario that goes far in explaining why most SSA countries have low or negative per capita growth rates. This study identifies the range of financial assets that can adequately approximate financial deepening, which simply means an increase in the supply of financial assets in the economy.FD is represented by two variables, the degree of financial intermediation/development (M2/Y) and the growth rate in per capita real money balances (GPRMB). Because of lack of data on other measures of financial assets in most SSA countries, broad money (M2) was used as numerator for both variables. Estimations depending on the two measures of FD and other explanatory variables of interest were done with an ordinary least squares (OLS) multiple regression procedure. Three modelled equations, with justifications for each, were estimated and analysed. A cross-country regression was used for 34 SSA countries. To even out year-to-year fluctuations as well as reflect underlying structural changes, the variables were calculated on a decade average basis. Two policy implications derive from the study: that SSA countries should strive hard to make real money balances grow, and that these countries should also come up with policies to improve financial development/intermediation. Given such factors as price stabilization, elimination of fiscal deficit and removal of various restrictions on financial institutions, real money balances could be made to grow. Financial intermediation/development could positively affect output growth if, among other suggested ways, the volume of investment is raised"--African Economic Research Consortium web site.
